Country vs. Town.

MONDAY MORNING ..

Why is it that agriculture is the most despised pursuit in the United States? That it is so, we are free to declare, in the face of the town people who affect to be fond of the country, merely to please their country customers and acquaintances, and in the face of the country folks, who, though they may affect an independent preference for their own mode of life, nevertheless think, and are educated to feel, that farming is the lowest condition of American life. The mass of farmers are taught to look with jealousy on the merchants and professional men of the towns, and imagine they grow rich suddenly and without labor. We say they are taught to feel thus. Erroneous ideas are instilled into their minds when young. The country boy comes to town in his homespun dress, and gazes with wondering curiosity upon the novelties about him, and he is forthwith snubbed by the insolent town boy and laughed at as "green;" he goes home discontented, thinking that town folks are his superiors and that living in the country is a despised mode of life.

The country girl is also laughed at by the pert school misses of the village and city, for the shape of her bonnet and the healthy proportions of her limbs, and she returns to her rustic home, mortified with herself for having been born beneath the skies of the country. The next time she goes to town, she tries to gain respect and reach an equality with her fancied superiors, by imitating their dress and customs; her brother, also, tries to be smart by smoking eigar, and acting as though he had been in town before, and didn't love the country near as well as he was supposed to. So, the whole rising population of the country, by aping the mannerisms of the town, acknowledge their inferiority and degrade themselves in their own estimation. If the country girl is sent off to school to get a iseful education, fitting her better for the duties of home, she gets the foolish notion into her head that she must marry some town sprig, because he looks nicer and "slicker" than her country friends; if her brother is sent to school or college, he thinks he knows too much for a farmer, and he must turn doctor, lawyer, or a store clerk. And thus, we say, as the population of the country grows up, they are educated to undervalue their own pursuits; to despise their condition in life, and to long for the honor and case—as they fancy it must be-to live in town, strut over clean pavements, fan themselves in the shade, eat, strink, get rich, and be happy.

It is hard to root out this false impression among tillers of the soil, that town folks have the easiest time of it; it has a bad eflect on the young men of the country; when they are snubbed, laughed at, and ridicaled by the ill-bred pimps of the town, and smarting under the mortification, they reason thus: "We in the country are theserfs; they in town are the lords; we work hard all the year; they do nothing but enjoy the fruits of our labor; we are the producers; they the consumers; we toil and spin, and they laugh at our ignorance and little enjoyment; they 'toil not, neither do they spin yet in our Sunday suit we are not arrayed like one of them; farming is pleasureless, profitless, and dishonorable." The of property in Victoria has fallen greatly, consequence of all these false views is, that and many of the houses built within the farming, as an honorable science, is neglect- last year are vacant. It is admitted now that ed by the best men-that is, by those best British Columbia must derive all, or nearly fitted by education for the pursuit, and left all its emigrants from England and Scot to the most ignorant, the least aspiring and land energetic. If farmers could but be brought to know and reflect what a continous drudgery is the life of most of our merchant and professional men in the city-what weary days they spend year after year, sitting perhaps as though doing nothing and at eace, but in reality overwhelmned with mental toil and wearying cares, and envy ing the careless life of the farmer; spending night after night, plotting, planning, and money, or which the thief had spent all but toiling till a late hour at the sacrifice of rest | thirty dollars. He gave lifteen dollars to and sleep, while the careless sons of the soil | the person who made the arrest, and kent are reposing sweetly and serenely on their | the rest as fees. The stranger appealed to couches in the pleasant homes of the coun- his lawyer, saying that he was a stranger, try, we think they would be far from envying the lot of the pent up denizens of the of returning to his home. Cole told him and prejudices of farmers, we cannot avoid | per, heading it with his own name for $2.50, the stubborn facts that agriculture in our and charging the gentleman that amount country is not what it should be; it does for drawing up the paper! not progress so capidly as the mechanical arts and the less useful sciences. Inventions and improvements in agricultural implements even go ahead of the wants, or rather of that vicinity, died recently, just one year Italways succeeds wherever it is introduced. I is the prime pursuit of man, and the noblest, John had predicted that he would be buried | way before it as ignorance flies before the advance of because the most necessary pursuit, and above all others, it calls forth the most extensive range of human science. Chemistry, Geology, Botany, Physiology, Mechanics. Mathematics, and the minor explorations of Nature are all involved in the ordinary pursuits of agriculture. There is a reform needed on this subject. If the intelligent but use taken young men who are starying the overstocked professions and clerkships of the town and city, were to turn and devote their energies to farming; if country people would cease to become discontented and move to lown, and if members of the idle and useless inhabitants of while the men were at work, discovered a the town would go out and settle at work bottle which had liquor in it. Not knowupon some farms, the country would advance ling the effect it would have, he drank a with new life and increased wealth, and the large quantity, from the effects of which he town would improve in a like ratio, because relieved of a useless burden. The country needs more successful producers, and to effect this the standard of agriculture must be elevated among human pursuits. We shall have more to say upon this hereafter.

If there is any one rehion more absurd or cruel than snother, it is that of making little girls dreeser and skirts to be worn entirely off from the shoulder. One cannot meet a child, whose mother is more fashionable than wise, without feeling distressed for the efforts of the little one to use its arms, and constant shrugging of the shoulders to get one or the other a little liberty. This fashion undoubtedly does much to cause the almost universal deformity of shoulders observable in women.

WYANDOTTE CAVE .- This wonderful cave, which is situated a few miles back of Leavenworth, in this State, is being visited the present season by a great number of persons from diferent parts of the country .-All concur in pronouncing it one of the greatest natural curiosities of the age, and a gentleman who has explored it thoroughly and who is also familiar with the wonders of the celebrated Mammoth Cave, writes to the Fort Wayne Times, that the Indiana cave far excells the other in extent and grandeur. This statement has been frequently made before by different individuals, but the reputation of the Mammoth Cave is so wide-spread and the annual visitors to it so numerous that it seems people are loath to believe that it possesses a rival of such magnificence as the Wyandotte Cave. We are informed that a number of persons in this city propose getting up a party for the purpose of visiting the latter, and to make an exploration of its marvelons subterranean apartments and curiosities.

The Princess and the Physician. Few foreigners who were sojourning in Rome during the Autumn of 18-, can fail to remember the violent illness of the beautiful Princess C-, which suddenly withdrew from the brilliant social circles of that city their fairest ornament. The means by which that illustrious lady was restored to health, when given over by all the faculty in Rome, is not, however, so generally known. She owes her life, and is ever prompt to acknowledge the obligation, to the most distinguished physician of the age. Dr. Thomas Holloway. That extraordinary man happened to arrive in the "Sevenbilled City " just at the crisis of her disorder, and was immediately summoned to her palace. He found the Princess in a sad con-

During an evening drive through the Campagna, she had been smitten by the tearful malaria, which sometimes arises from the adjacent marshes. The consequence was a violent bilious attack, terminating in jaundice. The lovely face, which had dazzled all eyes, and eclipsed all rivals at ball and banquet, was yellow as saffron, and the eyes, which had kindled love and admiration in a thousand hearts, were duller than lead. In a feeble voice, she inquired of the Doctor what could be done for her, at the same time protesting that if the bne that now tinged her skin were to remain after her recovery she would rather die than live. Smiling at the pardonable vanity of one whose queenly beauty was the theme of every traveler who visited Rome, he told her cheerfully that her life and loveliness were both safe. His prediction proved true.-Under the influence of his irresistible Pills. the yellow suffusion began to pass off; and day by day, like a star bursting through a cloud, her beauty was re-developed. Within six weeks it was announced that the Princess would soon gladden the eyes of her admirers at an evening festival to take place at her chateau at Tivoli in honor of her re-

It may Il be supposed that the Princess would willingly have displayed her gratitude on a magnificent scale, but this Dr. H. would not permit. He refused to receive anything, save a mere souvenir; and she presented him with a most appropriate one.

It was a double miniature, set in emeraldand diamonds, one case representing the Princess as she lay upon her sick bed, despoiled by disease of all her charms, and the other containing her likeness as she appeared at the fete, in the full bloom of restored health and beauty. The memento was accompanied by a note in which were these words: "Whenever you look at the two pictures imagine, if you can, my boundless gratitude." It may well be supposed that Dr. Holloway treasures this delicate tribute to his skill among his choicest sourcnirs,-[" Courier Del Populo, Rome.
